

NEW YORK LETTER

Number One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-Two

HEARST NOMINATED

The Flag of the Cuban Republic Will Still Float—Fearful Storm at Sea—Many Wrecks.

New York, October 3.—Earthquakes, typhoons and cyclones no longer trouble us; we are getting used to them. As a maxim which has stood unchallenged for ages, "it is the unexpected that usually happens," and while this may be true as a rule, we all know that every rule has an exception, and one of the most startling exceptions took place at Buffalo on Monday when a man who was a prime factor for the Governorship himself could arise in a Democratic convention and announce that he could not and would not support Mr. Hearst and if the other party nominated a good man for Governor, he would support him, and stump the state for his election. It was a marvelous scene that followed Mr. Jerome's announcement; more than one-half of the convention leaped to their feet and cheered the most treasonable speech that was ever made in a Democratic convention, but Mr. Jerome did not stop there, he told the body that it was not a convention of the representative Democracy, that the Democratic party had been sold out to Mr. Hearst. Twenty years ago if Mr. Jerome had made such a speech in a Democratic convention he would be lucky if he even escaped with his life. The Democratic party has always been intolerant of kickers, especially such kickers as William Travers Jerome. The first sign of rebellion was crushed with an iron hand and unless something is done to whip the rebels into submission the politics of New York will remain unchanged for the next four years.

There are now many people who fully understand the tremendous sacrifice Mr. Hughes is making in accepting the Republican nomination for Governor. The peculiar abilities that Mr. Hughes possesses have a mercantile value which must not be overlooked in estimating the extent of the sacrifice he is making. Mr. Hughes is not a rich man; up to the present time his practice has been of a class where the work was hard and the remuneration small; after years of unremitting toil he has achieved fame; he can now dictate his own terms; great corporations need his services and are willing to pay for them; millions are at stake and in some instances hundreds of millions, as was the case with the New York Life and the Mutual Life Insurance companies. The opinion of a lawyer who knows the law would tell the officers how far they could go and escape State's Prison; the legal adviser was the most important officer in the institution; his word was law, he was the pilot on whose knowledge depended the safety and commercial health of the company.

From the account I have given of the enthusiasm awakened by Mr. Hughes' nomination, it must not be supposed that Mr. Hearst has no friends. The ratification meeting at the Madison Square Garden was crowded to suffocation an hour before the meeting and a fighting crowd of twenty thousand people were unable to get in. The appearance of Mr. Hearst was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm; desertions from his cause have been numerous and between now and election day, he may find Jordan "a very hard road to travel."

The Cubans are at last beginning to realize that the United States has no design on Cuban independence nor does it desire to annex our troublesome neighbor, for we have now more outstanding real estate than we can comfortably manage. Alaska on the north is thousands of miles from Honolulu on the east; the Philippines thousands of miles from Porto Rico, and each one, except Alaska, is a bill of expense that the United States would be glad to get rid of. The war with Spain cost the United States a barrel of money and a good sized army in the matter of human lives; after beating her at every point, we paid Spain twenty millions of dollars for a quit-claim deed for a damaged title to the Philippines which we have had to fight to keep possession of from that day to this. All of these new additions to our landed estate have thousands of miles of exposed sea coast on which, in case of war, a single gunboat could do more damage in a day than a mighty fleet could repair in a year.

The temporary government assumed by the United States is hailed as a victory by both of the contending parties and both have agreed to accept the intervention of the United States. The Cuban flag still floats over the public buildings; the Republic is not dead. Viva Cuba!

All the week ships have been coming in bearing fearful evidences of the terrible fury of the hurricane which has swept the shores of North and South America from Labrador to Cape Horn; a mighty ship of twenty-two thousand tons burden arrived here last week bruised, tattered and torn by the dreadful storm she met on her passage to this city. We can scarcely realize the enormous size of this ocean Leviathan till we remember that twenty-five or thirty years ago a ship of a thousand tons was considered a monster. It had accommodation for 3,000 passengers and its cabin apartments were equal to a first class hotel. The great ship was tossed on the mountain waves as if it were a child's toy. Its ventilators, skylights and lifeboats were swept away by a mountainous wave that completely buried the great ship under water; for a moment it seemed as if the ship was going to the bottom of the sea; women screamed and wept, others fell on their knees and prayed for mercy; there was a few seconds' pause and then the vessel shook itself as a big Newfoundland dog shakes the rain from his shaggy coat and the great ocean queen once more floated a living thing upon the stormy waves. This vessel passed three great wrecks, keels upward; when a calamity like that occurs at sea it comes so sudden there is no chance of escape; all on board go down with the wreck; none are left to tell the story. Nathan W. Miller

Monday morning Nathan W. Miller, one of Fishertown's most reputable citizens, entered into rest after an illness of three weeks from Bright's disease, aged 66 years, five months and 24 days. His parents were Isaac and Mary Ann Miller, who lived at Pleasantville at the time of his birth. In early life he was married at Osterburg to Miss Catherine S. Hoover who, with the following children, survives him: Mrs. Mary E. Winegardner of Point, Ambrose of Roaring Spring, John of Spring Meadow, Howard of Greentown, O., and Blair at home. One sister, Mrs. Rebecca Kincade of Everett, and two brothers, George of Johnstown and John of Salemville, also survive him. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at St. Luke's Reformed church near Fishertown by Rev. B. F. Bausman. Mr. Miller was a man of genuine worth and to know him was to appreciate him. In his death the community sustains a real loss. He was a soldier in the Civil War.

Death Caused by Fall

William D. Ritchey was found dead in the middle of the road, near his farm at Tatesville, by Jonas Sparks last Saturday morning. An examination of the body by Dr. Miller of Everett showed that the skull was crushed by having come in contact with a stone. A broken limb of the apple-tree points to the fact that Mr. Ritchey was picking apples when the limb broke, causing him to fall.

Mr. Ritchey was born near Tatesville on March 14, 1840. On April 23, 1861, he enlisted in Company F, 8th Reg., P. R. V., and served three years; he then re-enlisted and became Sergeant in Company H, 191st Reg., P. V., and was honorably discharged June 28, 1865, having served four years and two months and participated in many important engagements.

He was a member of the Dunkard church for many years. His wife and several children survive him. The funeral was held at the late home on Monday, conducted by Rev. David Stayer, assisted by Rev. Rush. The services were in charge of Post 131, G. A. R., of Everett. Interment was made in the Bethel cemetery at Tatesville.

Mrs. Edward Himes

Mrs. Anne Himes, an aged and respected colored woman, died at her home in Bedford on Friday, September 28, at the advanced age of 81 years. Her maiden name was Anne Brown. She was twice married, her first husband being Edward Norris; her second husband, Edward Himes, survives her. Funeral services were held at the late home Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Hicks, and interment was made in the cemetery west of town.

Elmer Burkett

Elmer Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Burkett, died at the home of his parents in Hyndman on Wednesday, September 26, after an illness of several days from diphtheria, aged 16 years, six months and eight days. He had been working at the brickyard and complained several days before taking violently ill. The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the house, Rev. D. I. Hershberger officiating, after which the remains were taken to Palo Alto for interment.

Entertainment

In keeping with a recent action of the Loyal Temperance Legion, a regular monthly musical and literary entertainment will be given in their lodge room, Brode Building, the first Friday evening of each winter month. The program planned for this (Friday) evening's exercises is of special interest, including vocal music, recitations and other literary work, together with graphophone productions which always pleases both young and old. A generous patronage is solicited. Admission, adults, 10 cents; Legioners and other young people, 5 cents. Hour, 7:30 p. m.

POLITICAL MEETING

LEWIS EMERY, JR.

Democrats, Lincoln Republicans and all others in favor of honesty and economy in public expenditures and opposed to MACHINE RULE should attend the mass meeting at the Court House in Bedford, Monday afternoon at four o'clock and hear the issues of the campaign discussed by

HON. LEWIS EMERY, JR.,

Democratic-Lincoln Candidate for Governor;

HON. JEREMIAH S. BLACK,

Democratic-Lincoln Candidate for Lieutenant Governor;

HON. WILLIAM T. CREASY,

Democratic, Lincoln and Prohibition Candidate for Auditor General, and

HON. RUDOLPH BLANKENBURG,

of Philadelphia.

Leander Wilson Gernand

Leander Wilson Gernand was born at Graceham, Md., on January 28, 1836, and died at his home in Mann's Choice, of Bright's disease, on Wednesday, September 26, aged 70 years, seven months and 28 days. His boyhood was spent at Thermo, Md., afterwards moving to Somerset where he was engaged in the tanning business. While there he met and married Miss Christina Hanneke and resided in Mt. Union and Harrisburg. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Mann's Choice, moving there in 1867, when there were few houses, and was foreman of the tannery for four years. For 22 years he sold bark to Pittsburg and Allegheny tanneries and until 1896 was engaged in the mercantile business at Mann's Choice and at Madley.

Mr. Gernand was a sober, industrious man, a good citizen and one of whom Mann's Choice could well be proud. He was a consistent member of the M. E. church for 43 years, and held positions of trust and confidence. He is survived by his wife and three daughters: Mrs. Mary B. Garman of Cumberland and Mrs. Minerva E. Cuppett and Miss Laura, of Mann's Choice. Two sons preceded him to the world beyond: Robert, in 1883, and Edward in 1890. Funeral services were conducted Friday morning by Rev. Guldin and interment was made in the Mann's Choice cemetery.

Mrs. Levi Putt

Mrs. Kate Putt, wife of Levi Putt, died at her home in Stonerstown on Tuesday, September 25, aged about 56 years. Her death was due to cancer, which which she was a sufferer for over a year. She was a woman who had the esteem of her neighbors, generous and sympathetic in her nature. Her husband and one son survive her. The funeral services were held at the late home last Thursday morning.

Tomorrow, October 6, is the last day for paying poll tax for voters to qualify who have not paid a poll tax since November 7, 1904.

CHAPTER IX.

IT may have been that Mlle. Nanon, the faithful confidante of Mme. de Maitenon, had learned something of this interview, or it may be that Pere la Chaise, with the shrewdness for which his order is famous, had come to the conclusion that publicity was the best means of holding the king to his present intention, but, whatever the source, it was known all over the court next day that the old favorite was again in disgrace and that there was talk of a marriage between the king and the governess of his children. By midday there was none in the court who had not heard the tidings save only Mme. de Montespan, who, alarmed at her lover's absence, had remained in haughty seclusion in her room and knew nothing of what had passed.

Louis in his innate selfishness had been so accustomed to regard every event entirely from the side of how it would affect himself that it had never struck him that his long suffering family, who had always yielded to him the absolute obedience which he claimed as his right, would venture to offer any opposition to his new resolution. He was surprised, therefore, when his brother demanded a private interview that afternoon and entered his presence without the complaisant smile and humble air with which he was wont to appear before him.

"Why, monsieur, you seem less gay than usual today," said the king, with a smile. "Your dress indeed is bright, but your brow is clouded. I trust that all is well with madame and with the Duc de Chartres."

"Yes, sire, they are well, but they are sad, like myself, and from the same cause."

"Indeed! And why?"

"Have I ever failed in my duty as your younger brother, sire?"

"Never, Philippe, never," said the king, laying his hand affectionately upon the other's shoulder. "You have set an excellent example to my subjects."

"Then why set a slight upon me?"

"Philippe!"

"Yes, sire, I say it is a slight. We are of royal blood, and our wives are of royal blood also. You married the Princess of Spain; I married the Princess of Bavaria. It was a condescension, but still I did it. My first wife was the Princess of England. How can we admit into a house which has formed such alliances as these a woman who is the widow of a hunchback singer, a mere lampooner, a man whose name is a byword through Europe?"

The king had stared in amazement at his brother, but his anger now overcame his astonishment.

"Upon my word!" he cried; "upon my word! I have said just now that you have been an excellent brother, but I fear that I spoke a little prematurely. And so you take upon yourself to object to the lady whom I select as my wife?"

"I do, sire."

"And by what right?"

"By the right of the family honor, sire, which is as much mine as yours. I look upon it as a slight upon me and a slight upon my wife."

"Your wife! I have every respect for Charlotte Elizabeth of Bavaria, but how is she superior to one whose grandfather was the dear friend and comrade in arms of Henry the Great? Enough! I will not condescend to argue such a matter with you! Be gone, and do not return to my presence until you have learned not to interfere in my affairs."

"For all that, my wife shall not know her!" snarled monsieur.

The king was to have no quiet that day. If Mme. de Maitenon's friends had rallied to her yesterday her enemies were active today. Monsieur had hardly disappeared before there rushed into the room a youth who bore upon his rich attire every sign of having just arrived from a dusty journey. He was pale faced and auburn haired, with features which would have been strikingly like the king's if it were not that his nose had been disfigured in his youth. The king's face had lighted up at the sight of him, but it darkened again as he hurried forward and threw himself down at his feet.

"Oh, sire," he cried, "spare us this grief—spare us this humiliation! I implore you to pause before you do what will bring dishonor upon yourself and upon us!"

The king started back from him. "This is intolerable!" he cried. "It was bad from my brother, but worse from my son. You are in a conspiracy with him, Louis. Monsieur has told you to act this part."

The dauphin rose to his feet and looked steadfastly at his angry father. "I have not seen my uncle," he said. "I was at Meudon when I heard this news—this dreadful news—and I sprang upon my horse, and galloped over to implore you to think again before you drag our royal house so low."

"You talk like a fool!" cried his father. "I propose to marry a virtuous and charming lady of one of the oldest noble families of France, and you talk as if I were doing something degrading and unheard of."

"She is the daughter of a man whose vices were well known, her brother is of the worst repute, she has led the life of an adventuress, is the widow of a deformed scribbler, and she occupies a menial position in the palace."

"Pass it through my heart, sire!"

The king had stamped with his foot upon the carpet more than once during this frank address, but his anger blazed into a fury at its conclusion.

"Do you dare," he cried, with flashing eyes, "to call the charge of my children a menial position? I say that there is no higher in the kingdom. Go back to Meudon, sir, this instant and never dare to open your mouth again on the subject."

The young man bowed low and walked with dignity from the chamber.

The king's first hot anger had died away by now and had left behind it a cold, bitter spirit which was even more formidable to his antagonists.

But he had little breathing space. His assailants knew that with persistence they had bent his will before, and they trusted that they might do so again. It was Louvois, the minister, now who entered the room, with his majestic port, his lofty bearing, his huge wig and his aristocratic face, which, however, showed some signs of trepidation as it met the baleful eye of the king.

"Well, Louvois, what now?" he asked impatiently. "Has some new state matter arisen?"

"There is but one new state matter which has arisen, sire, but it is of such importance as to banish all others from our mind—your marriage, sire."

"You disapprove of it?"

"Oh, sire, can I help it?"

"Out of my room, sir! Am I to be tormented to death by your importunities? What! You dare to linger when I order you to go!" The king advanced angrily upon the minister, but Louvois suddenly flashed out his rapier. Louis sprang back, with alarm and amazement upon his face, but it was the bit and not the point which was presented to him.

"Pass it through my heart, sire!" the minister cried, falling upon his knees, his whole great frame in a quiver with emotion. "I will not live to see your glory fade!"

"Great heaven!" shrieked Louis, throwing the sword down upon the ground. "I believe that this is a conspiracy to drive me mad. Was ever a man so tormented in this life? This will be a private marriage, man, and it will not affect the state in the least degree."

Louvois gathered himself up and shot his rapier back into its sheath.

"Your majesty is determined?" he

For Lung Troubles

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral certainly cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption. And it certainly strengthens weak throats and weak lungs. There can be no mistake about this. You know it is true. And your own doctor will say so.

"My little boy had a terrible cough. I tried everything I could hear of, but in vain until I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The first night he was better, and he steadily improved until he was perfectly well."—Mrs. S. J. Sprague, Alton, Ill.

"The Blood is the Life."
Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgment are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

"Absolutely."
"Then I say no more. I have done my duty." He bowed his head as one in deep dejection when he departed, but in truth his heart was lightened within him, for he had the king's assurance that the woman whom he hated would, even though his wife, not sit on the throne of the queens of France.

These repeated attacks, if they had not shaken the king's resolution, had at least irritated and exasperated him to the utmost. He wore accordingly no very cordial face when the usher in attendance admitted the venerable figure of Father la Chaise. His confessor.

"I wish you all happiness, sire," said the Jesuit, "and I congratulate you from my heart that you have taken the great step which must lead to contentment in this world and the next."

"I have had neither happiness nor contentment yet, father," answered the king peevishly. "I have never been so pestered in my life. The whole court has been on its knees to me to change my intention."

The Jesuit looked at him anxiously out of his keen gray eyes.

"Fortunately your majesty is a man of strong will," said he, "and not to be so easily swayed as they think."

"No, no, I did not give an inch. But still it must be confessed that it is very unpleasant to have so many against one."

"Then there is the more credit to your majesty for having resisted them. You have done nobly, sire. You have earned the praise and blessing of holy church."

"I trust that what I have done is right, father," said the king gravely. "I should be glad to see you again later in the evening, but at present I desire a little leisure for solitary thought."

Father la Chaise left the cabinet with a deep distrust of the king's intentions. It was obvious that the powerful appeals which had been made to him had shaken if they had failed to alter his resolution. What would be the result if more were made? And more would be made. That was as certain as that darkness follows light. Some master card must be played now which would bring the matter to a crisis at once.

The bishop of Meaux was waiting in the anteroom, and Father la Chaise in a few brief words let him see the danger of the situation and the means by which they should meet it. Together they sought Mme. de Maitenon in her room. As the two plotters looked upon her perfect complexion, her regular features, so calm and yet so full of refinement, and the exquisite grace of her figure and bearing they could not but feel that if they failed in their ends it was not for want of having a perfect tool.

She had risen at their entrance, and her expression showed that she had read upon their faces something of the anxiety which filled their minds.

"You have evil news," she cried. "No, no, my daughter." It was the bishop who spoke. "But we must be on our guard against our enemies, who would turn the king away from you if they could."

Her face shone at the mention of her lover. "Ah, you do not know!" she cried. "He has made a vow. I would trust him as I would trust myself."

But the Jesuit's intellect was arrayed against the intuition of the woman. "Our opponents are many and strong," said he, shaking his head. "We must bring the matter to an end."

"And how, father?"
"The marriage must be at once, this very night if possible."
"Oh, father; you ask too much. The king would never consent to such a proposal."

"It is he that will propose it."

"And why?"

"Because we shall force him to. It is only thus that all opposition can be stopped. When it is done the court will accept it. Until it is done they will resist it."

"What would you have me do, then, father?"

"Resign the king."

"Resign him!" She turned as pale as a lily.

"It is the best course, madame."

"Ah, father, I might have done it last month, last week, even yesterday morning."

"Fear not, madame. We advise you for the best. Go to the king now, at once. Say to him that you have heard that he has been subjected to much annoyance upon your account, that you cannot bear to think that you should be a cause of dissension in his own family and that therefore you will release him from his promise and will withdraw yourself from the court forever."

She cast a light mantle about her shoulders.

"I follow your advice," she said. "I believe that you are wiser than I. But, oh, if he should take me at my word!"

"He will not take you at your word."

The king had remained alone in his cabinet, wrapped in somewhat gloomy thoughts. Suddenly there came a gentle tap at the door, and there was the woman who was in his thoughts standing in the twilight before him. He sprang to his feet and held out his hands with a smile.

"Francoise! You here? Then I have at last a welcome visitor, and it is the first one today."

"Sire, I fear that you have been troubled."

"I have indeed, Francoise."

"But I have a remedy for it."

"And what is that?"

"I shall leave the court, sire, and you shall think no more of what has passed between us. I have brought discord where I meant to bring peace. Let me retire to St. Cyr or to the Abbey of Fontevault, and you will no longer be called upon to make such sacrifices for my sake."

The king turned deathly pale and clutched at her shawl with a trembling hand, as though he feared that she was about to put her resolution into effect that very instant.

"No, no, Francoise; you must not leave me! You must stay with me and be my wife." He could hardly speak for agitation, and he still grasped at her dress to detain her.

"Some time must elapse before our wedding, sire. Yet during all that interval you will be exposed to these annoyances. How can I be happy when I feel that I have brought upon you so long a period of discomfort? A day would be too long, sire, for you to be unhappy through my fault. It is a misery to me to think of it. Believe me, it would be better that I should leave you."

"Never! You shall not! Why should we even wait a day, Francoise? I am ready. You are ready. Why should we not be married now?"

"At once? Oh, sire!"

"We shall. It is my wish. It is my order. That is my answer to those who would drive me. Let it be done secretly, Francoise. I will send in a trusty messenger this very night for the archbishop of Paris, and I swear that if all France stand in the way he shall make us man and wife before he departs."

"Is it your will, sire?"

"It is, and, ah, I can see by your eyes that it is yours also! We shall not lose a moment, Francoise. What a blessed thought of mine, which will silence their tongues forever! When it is ready they may know, but not before."

The king was all on fire with the excitement of this new resolution. He had lost his air of doubt and discontent, and he paced swiftly about the room with a smiling face and shining eyes; then he touched a small gold bell, which summoned Bontems, his private body servant.

"What o'clock is it, Bontems?"

"It is nearly 6, sire."

"Hum!" The king considered for some moments.

"Do you know where Captain de Calvat is, Bontems?"

"He was in the grounds, sire, but I heard that he would ride back to Paris tonight."

"Does he ride alone?"

"He has one friend with him."

"Who is this friend—an officer of the guards?"

"No, sire; it is a stranger from over the seas—from America, as I understand—who has stayed with him of late."

"A stranger! So much the better. Go, Bontems, and bring them both to me."

"I trust that they have not started, sire. I will see." He hurried off and was back in ten minutes in the cabinet once more.

"Well?"

"I have been fortunate, sire. Their horses had been led out and their feet were in the stirrups when I reached them."

"Where are they, then?"

"They await your majesty's orders in the anteroom."

"Show them in, Bontems, and give admission to none, not even to the minister, until they have left me." To De Catinat an audience with the monarch was a common incident of his duties, but it was with profound astonishment that he learned from Bontem that his friend and companion was included in the order.

It was with a feeling of curiosity not unmixed with awe, that Amos Green entered the private chamber of the greatest monarch in Christendom. As his eyes fell upon a quietly dressed, bright eyed man, half a head shorter than himself, with a trim, dapper figure and an erect carriage, he could not help glancing round the room to see if this were indeed the monarch or if it were some other of those endless officials who interposed themselves between him and the outer world. The reverent salute of his companion, however, showed him that this must indeed be the king, so he bowed, and then drew himself erect with the simple dignity of a man who had been trained in nature's school.

"Good evening, Captain de Catinat," said the king, with a pleasant smile

"You must stay with me and be my wife."

"Your friend, as I understand, is a stranger to this country. I trust, sir, that you have found something here to interest and to amuse you?"

"Yes, your majesty. I have seen your great city, and it is a wonderful one. And my friend has shown me this palace, with its woods and its grounds. When I go back to my own country I will have much to say of what I have seen in your beautiful land."

"You speak French, and yet you are not a Canadian."

"No, sire; I am from the English provinces."

The king looked with interest at the powerful figure, the bold features and the free bearing of the young foreigner, and his mind flashed back to the dangers which the Comte de Frontenac had foretold from these same colonies. His mind, however, ran at present on other things than statecraft, and he hastened to give De Catinat his orders for the night.

"You will ride into Paris on my service. Your friend can go with you. Two are safer than one when they bear a message of state. I wish you, however, to wait until nightfall before you start."

"Yes, sire."

"Let none know your errand and see that none follow you. Go to the house of Archbishop Harlay, prelate of Paris, and bid him drive out hither and be at the northwest side postern by midnight. Let nothing hold him back. Storm or fine, he must be here tonight. It is of the first importance. Adieu, captain. Adieu, monsieur."

TWO OF A KIND

The recent utterance of Editor Bailey, the purport of which was to stain the memory of the late Judge Dean, will be resented by the friends of honor and fair play not only in Blair but throughout the district. But he stands not alone in his method. Two years ago John M. Reynolds endeavored to escape just punishment for his vile utterances against the gallant soldiers of the Rebellion by laying the authorship of his editorials to the account of the late John G. Fisher. The grave was not then able, nor is it now in Bailey's case, to hurl back denial nor even to raise a small voice of protest, but the living are not always derelict and such intemperate insults are not allowed to go unpunished.

REPUBLICANS DENOUNCE IT

The effort of Senator Miller to have his name placed on the Lincoln Party ticket has not met with favor even in the ranks of "Stand-patters."

Senator Miller is recognized by all political parties in the district as an open advocate of the state machine—a tool of the very man, Senator Penrose, to whom the Lincoln Party is opposed openly and strongly. If the court should decide that his name is to remain on the ticket it would be an outrage upon the party and a stamp of theft upon the part of Senator Miller and those who perpetrated the foul and sinister act. It will add nothing to the honor, if they have any, of Moseby and Swindle and the other conspirators who were the instruments and the tools, nor will it do Dr. Miller any good for there are tried and true Republicans in this county at least who look upon it as a trick dishonest and detestable and unworthy a man representing this district in the State Senate.

One of Mr. Reynolds' organs claims that that personage had nothing to do with the scheme, but the frequent visits by Moseby to the office of the Congressman while the former was in Bedford and the fact that those in Reynolds' employ were detailed to bring the Bedford conferees to the conference, in which they failed, seems to indicate that John M. had a finger in the pie.

A BEAUTIFUL BOUQUET

At this time of year, when flowers are not plenty, Congressman Reynolds could hardly hope for a more beautiful bouquet than was presented at the conference which nominated him by Moses A. Points, Esq. Toward the end of his classic oration Mr. Points says, "His private reputation is unstained, his life is transparent and 'chaste as the icicle that's curbed by the frost from purest snow,' and hangs on Diana's temple." What an example and an inspiration to the young men 'who are living, who are moving in this grand eventful time.' A beautiful thought, to be sure, but the young men who are seeking an example and inspiration had best steer clear of his political life. The reference to a temple suggests our local court house, on the steps of which he made the famous speech, "I'll be G—d— If Pennell will ever be judge," while hastening to his office for his grip to take the train for Harrisburg to carry out his threat. And this took place but a short time after he had pledged his word and his honor to do directly the opposite. Such examples are to be avoided by the young men who are seeking inspiration; yet such deeds are numerous in the political life of Diana's icicle man.

EDITOR BAILEY'S ATTITUDE

In an almost continuous tirade Warren Worth Bailey has attacked and re-attacked Hon. Joseph E. Thropp, the candidate of the Democratic and Lincoln parties for Congress. The caps of his climaxes always are either that he is "Vice President of the Protective Tariff League," "An advocate of the Robber Tariff" or an "Iron Master."

As to the first of these accusations it is true, but in its true sense protective tariff doesn't mean "high" tariff nor "robber" tariff. He is a protectionist, but only so far as American labor is concerned. His position is clearly defined in a letter to the writer, which letter is, in full, as follows:

Earlston, Pa., July 25, 1906.

To the Editor of The Gazette,
My Dear Sir:—I can with propriety, and I hope without being misunderstood, answer your letter of the 24th inst., which just before me, in which you ask my views on the tariff and intimate that you have been informed they have undergone a change.

I have always entertained a different view of this subject from some of my associates and fellow-workers in the cause. I do not believe in fixing a duty which will help selfish individuals to reap excessive profits at the expense of the great mass of our people and without letting the people at large have their proportion of the benefits. I do not think the large part of our industries need what is classed as protective duties, but I do favor what might fitly be termed equalizing rates; that is, I would make the duties on imported articles equal the differences in the cost of labor entering into the production of the articles from the time the process of development was started until the articles reached the market. This, as you will see, is PROTECTION TO AMERICAN LABOR PURE AND SIMPLE. With these differences provided for, if any of the established American industries cannot develop, those directing them had better seek some other line of occupation. I do not favor the cheapening of an article by cheapening the working people who help to develop it. Some people wish to pay a low price for all they buy and to obtain high prices for all they sell. This is narrow selfishness.

Very truly yours,

Joseph E. Thropp.

While there may be members of the American Protective Tariff League who advocate high tariff, that does not commit Mr. Thropp to such a policy any more than the advocacy of absolute free trade and single tax doctrines by Editor Bailey commits the Democracy of the district to those doctrines. Though Mr. Thropp's views on the tariff may not meet in every particular those advocated by the rank and file of the Democracy of the district they are infinitely preferable to those entertained (?) and promulgated by Congressman Reynolds, and are not wide of the mark more than the other extreme which Mr. Bailey represents.

The accusation that he is an "iron master" is true. He is indeed a sufficient master of the iron business to successfully operate, his furnace and ovens and quarries and thereby give employment to more laboring men in this county than any other man or group of men. His is the only furnace that has not failed, and surely THE BUSINESS ABILITY THAT ENABLES HIM TO SUCCESSFULLY CARRY ON THESE EXTENSIVE WORKS DOES NOT DISQUALIFY HIM TO SERVE HIS DISTRICT IN CONGRESS.

At the outstart Mr. Bailey's representatives in the congressional conferences only asked assurance that the Cambria local ticket would be endorsed by the Lincoln people, but now the wind is blowing from another direction and he is having nomination papers signed to become an independent candidate, which candidacy can but further the cause of Congressman Reynolds. What private reasons for thus acting we are not prepared to say but he has all the outward appearances of a stool pigeon, and these appearances together with the fact that he secured names from Reynolds' hearers here and has been in communication with and advised by them drives the normal mind to the conclusion that the shade of Reynolds is hovering in the thick.

When a horse is so overworked it lies down and in other ways declares its inability to go further, you would consider it criminal to use force. Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol For Dyspepsia that is sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

STILL THEY COME

Expressions of Appreciation of the Centennial Edition.
Cumberland, Md., October 1, '06.
Mr. S. A. Van Ormer,
Editor Bedford Gazette,
Bedford, Pa.

My Dear Sam,

I have carefully perused all the four sections of your incomparable Centennial Edition. I cannot express in words my high appreciation of your enterprise and editorial abilities in compiling so many reminiscences and historical facts in one single issue. I showed it to a valued old friend who has for thirty years been a member of the Maryland Democratic Editorial Association and he was delighted with it. To use his own forceful language, he says, "It is superbly unique and surpasses anything in the journalistic line ever attempted and accomplished in Bedford county." Thirty-three years ago this friend was the founder and editor of the Garrett County Herald, the first newspaper published in that new and prosperous county, at Oakland, Md. He says the Bedford Gazette was one of his first and most valued exchanges. He says your compendium of the first issue of The Gazette in 1805, Penn's Purchase from the Indians, The Boundaries as designated in 1771, Looking Backward at the honored roll of editors of The Gazette during the past century, Building of Thoroughfares, Reminiscences of President Buchanan, et al., Battle of Ray's Cove, and an endless variety of other interesting historical sketches render it a veritable vade mecum of useful knowledge which should be carefully preserved by every intelligent citizen of Bedford county. May you be prosperous.

Yours truly,

A. A. Egolf.

Columbus, O., October 1, 1906.

My dear Mr. Van Ormer:—Owing to my absence from Columbus your Centennial Edition did not reach me till it was a week old. Have read nearly every line in it. If all of your ten thousand readers enjoyed and appreciated the contents of that special issue as much as I did, you certainly have an appreciative lot of readers. Being a practical printer and newspaper man, I know something about the amount of work, expense, and patience required to issue such an edition. Knowing this, and seeing how well he succeeded, I should like to shake hands with the editor, and the printers, and the proof-reader, and the devil, and the correspondents, and congratulate each one of them on their good work. Viva Gazette!

By the way, General Arthur St. Clair, Bedford county's first Prothonotary, was the first Territorial Governor of Ohio—the Northwest Territory. Maybe you have known that for years. I have never seen this fact stated in any of the Bedford county histories. Governor St. Clair's portrait hangs in the State House at Columbus. Your friend,

George M. Mann.

Hyndman, October 1, '06.

Dear Mr. Van Ormer:
You are to be congratulated upon the valuable contents of this extraordinary (Centennial) issue of The Gazette as well as for its splendid and neat typographical appearance. The paper is a credit to the entire force in your establishment and it is a fitting climax to a century's existence.

Wishing you continued success in the journalistic field, I am,
Yours very truly,
Chas. R. Rhodes.

The Centennial Edition of the Bedford Gazette, published last Saturday, is a highly prized souvenir, and a most interesting and historical edition of thirty-two pages. During its existence ten editors have ably conducted the paper, and with the exception of the founder, Mr. Charles McDowell, their pictures are familiar to us—having seen them in life, and all have passed away excepting four. The Gazette has no peer as a family paper and the Life wishes it continued success.—Pittsburg Life.

The Bedford Gazette celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of its establishment last week by issuing a Centennial Edition. Our esteemed contemporary has had a remarkable and interesting history, which is published along with 30 pages of very interesting historical matter relating to the town and county which has been its home. The edition reflects the highest credit upon the editor, for it was without doubt a stupendous task to prepare for it. We wish The Gazette many more centuries of prosperity.—Tyrone Times, September 29.

Enough Coal for 400 Years

The Royal Commission of experts on British coal supplies reports sufficient coal unmined to last about 400 years at the present rate of consumption, so that there is no need to worry about the fuel question. There is also no need to worry when the appetite is poor, the nerves unstrung, sleep restless and the bowels constipated. Just get a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters from your druggist and take a dose before meals and at bedtime and see how quickly your ailments will disappear. You'll wonder why you suffered so long when the medicine to cure you was always within your reach. It always cures poor appetite, belching, nervousness, constipation, dyspepsia, flatulency, indigestion, female ailments, biliousness, liver and kidney ailments or malaria, fever and ague. Try it today.

TUBULAR CHIMES

Successful Work of Former Bedford Pastor.

Hanover's Sabbath calm was accentuated, rather than broken, by the sweet notes of a set of tubular chimes which had been quietly installed in St. Mark's Lutheran church during last week.

Tubular chimes are a rarity in this country, and credit for putting them in the tower of the Hanover church belongs to the pastor, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Stock. When returning from the triennial convocation of the Grand Encampment, Knights Templars, in San Francisco, three years ago, Dr. Stock, who is a past grand commander of the order in this state, heard most ravishing music from a chime of bells in Riverside, Cal.

Inquiry revealed that the bells were of the tubular variety, and on his return to Hanover he put the young people of his church to work that St. Mark's might have a similar set. Pastor Stock laid the foundation of the $2,000 necessary by delivering tri-weekly lectures on his transcontinental trips, and the young people did the rest.

Tubular chimes are an English invention, far surpassing the ancient variety in sweetness and mellowness of tone. St. Mark's, Hanover, is the only church within a large area which possesses a set, and, indeed, there are but few in this country.

Rev. Stock was formerly pastor of Trinity Lutheran church of this place.

"Lips That Were Sealed"

Lippincott's October number opens with its usual complete novel which, it will be remembered, was a strong feature with this magazine long before other periodicals discovered its value. Its title this month is "Lips That Were Sealed."

Its author, Alma Martin Estabrook, is a healthy-minded young woman who gaily acknowledges that she "writes in broad daylight after substantial breakfasts." The promise of spice which is implied in the words "Lips That Were Sealed," is amply fulfilled in this story of men and women of today. The author's types are vigorous and fresh; besides, she has a "pretty wit" all her own. The crux of the plot leaves the reader in exciting doubt until the last—an evidence of good art. There is motion rapid enough to please the most exacting, and there is emotion plenty without lapsing into mere sentimentality. Altogether Miss Estabrook has produced that which may be read in an evening and remembered for a lifetime. "Lips That Were Sealed" should give the October Lippincott's a big sale—not to speak of the other contents, which are really above the average of even Lippincott's.

FRUIT GROWERS, ATTENTION!

Interesting Information With Regard to This Year's Apple Crop.

The fruit growers of this county will be interested to know the size of this year's apple crop. By what I can get from the fruit journals throughout these United States there is a larger crop this year than last.

Western New York has a large crop, while along the Hudson the average is very low. The middle west has a large crop, made up principally of Ben Davis, but because of the warm weather bitter rot is doing some damage. Canada and Nova Scotia have good crops. Europe also has a fair crop, but meat is high in price and more fruit is being consumed, especially in this so in Germany.

The crop of this county is about a half crop, but many are small because of the leaf blight which defoliated many of the orchards throughout the county. Apples on these trees will not develop but remain small and green, falling off before ripening. Those who have fruit to sell would do well to sort them carefully and wait a little for better prices which are sure to come. Hold your best apples for 50c per bushel for just now the markets are glutted. Local buyers may tell you different, but an attempt will be made to get others to come here to buy your best apples at a fair price.

County Orchard Inspector.

Bailey Bolts

Warren Worth Bailey of this city, who has been recognized for some time as having ambitions that soared above the drudgery of newspaper work, is determined to be a candidate for Congress, whether the district wants him particularly or otherwise. He was given the endorsement of the Democratic party in this county largely in the hope that this would tie his hands and prevent him from using what influence he has to prevent the only arrangement which could bring about the defeat of the Democrats of this district because he was a Democrat as long as there was profit in it, and deserted to the enemy when the hope of holding office under the Democratic party was at an end.

Mr. Bailey has circulated nomination papers in this city, and will undoubtedly be able to secure enough signatures to place his name on the ticket as a candidate for Congress. The flag under which he will sail his piratical political craft is to be lettered "Bryan Democracy."

It was believed that if Mr. Bailey's vanity was appeased by the endorsement of the county, he would, if he failed of nomination, support the regular ticket. However, it seems that this was a miscalculation, and Mr. Bailey's personal ambition is more powerful than his Democracy.

As soon as he realized that the leaders of Blair and Bedford counties were openly, and those of this county covertly, in favor of the nomination of Mr. Thropp, he gave it to be understood that he would not submit to the decision of the conference.

In order to provide some semblance of excuse for this course, he refused to appoint conferees, and questioned the authority which called the conference. The Blair and Bedford people met at Altoona, and when they found that Mr. Bailey had no conferees present, they adjourned the conference to this city, and fixed a date upon which they (six of them) declare that Mr. Bailey's "Man Friday," Hiram G. Andrews, promised that his chief would enter the conference with his regularly appointed conferees and help to make a nomination.

On the date agreed upon, Mr. Bailey kept the conferees waiting on his august presence for several hours, and then appeared with the story that another engagement would prevent his remaining for a full discussion of the matter. He had no conferees and said he would not appoint any until the Lincoln party in this county had done certain things.

It was with great reluctance that the conferees proceeded without representation from Cambria county. But there was absolutely no other course for it to pursue. Mr. Bailey alone had the power to appoint conferees from this county, and he positively declined to say definitely whether he would do so or otherwise. The nomination had to be made, and there seemed to be but little use in waiting on the gentleman from this county, who esteemed his convenience superior to that of the six men from Blair and Bedford.

Mr. Bailey's action has been hailed with delight by the Republican leaders, as they recognize that it is the only thing that can save their candidate from defeat, but the majority of his friends regard it as a most serious mistake.—Johnstown Journal.

Corn Crop Too Large

The corn crop of Morrison's Cove is so large and farm help so scarce that the farmers of that section have hit upon the plan of co-operation in order to get the crop harvested before the cold weather sets in. A dozen or more farmers gather on a certain farm and in a day or two cut off the entire corn crop on that farm. The next day they will move on to the next farm and will not leave until the work of harvesting the corn is completed. In this way all the farms in the neighborhood are visited and it is said that the work is done much more quickly and more easily by co-operation than by the old way of each farmer harvesting his own crop.

A Party That Surprised

Fifty people, including children, grand-children, relatives, friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ickes, of Cessna, found the good lady of the house seated at the fire place preparing a chicken for dinner for herself and Mr. Ickes. Not thinking that her 73rd birthday was remembered by any outside of her own house she little knew there was such a preparation for a dinner fit for a king going on among the neighbors, that it looked as though the one chicken intended for the venerable old couple, had increased in proportion to the miracle of loaves and fishes. We who were there wish the old lady may live many more years, and have such a dinner on every anniversary. Anon.

Bedford Won From Big Borough's Nine on Latter's Grounds.

In an interesting ball game on the Everett grounds the team of the Big Borough lost to the Bedford boys last Thursday, the score being 7 to 4.

The Everett boys had been claiming the championship of the county but this game, the fifth of a series in which each of the teams had won twice, placed Bedford in the lead. There were but two hits made off Slack, which is another evidence of his superiority as a twirler.

Mysterious Increase in Cost of Cleaning Streets—Attempted Blackmail of John Wanamaker.

[Copyright, 1905, by Albert Brandt.]

The same policy of suppression of competition and rapid increase in cost is shown in the contracts for cleaning the streets and removing ashes. Philadelphia, within the past ten or twelve years, has secured through the surface railway companies and large city appropriations for this purpose, a new and modern system of street-paving. The old cobble and rubble pavements have nearly disappeared, and their places have been taken by new and up-to-date pavements of Belgian block, vitrified brick and asphalt, thus rendering it possible to keep the entire series of streets measurably clean at a much decreased ratio of cost as compared with ten years ago. In addition to effective modern machinery for sweeping the streets has steadily tended to reduce the relative cost of this work, but the taxpayers of Philadelphia have failed to profit either by modern pavements or improved street-cleaning methods, so far as reducing the cost of cleaning their streets and collecting their ashes is concerned.

On the contrary, there has been an amazing as well as mysterious increase in the cost of this work. The contracts for cleaning the streets and removing the ashes for 1903 amounted in the aggregate to $693,850. The following year the price jumped nearly $200,000, or to be exact, to $891,190, an advance of nearly fifty per cent. in a single year. The only reasonable explanation that can be given for this sudden jump was that the local contractors farmed out the work among themselves, each agreeing to keep out of the districts in which the others operated, thus removing all local competition. Besides this, the short time allowed between the opening of the bids and the beginning of the work effectively excluded outside competitors. Under this arrangement the various contractors were neither expected nor compelled to keep the streets any cleaner nor to remove any greater increase of bulk of ashes over that of the previous year, but they were enabled to divide nearly $900,000 more among themselves. The following year the contract-price was decreased $81,000, one firm being given all the contracts. This firm explained its lower bid by the statement that it had likewise secured an extensive boulevard contract which furnished a convenient place for dumping ashes, and that by running the two contracts as companion enterprises it was able to save the city $131,000. It is entirely safe to assume, however, that if these contracts had been widely advertised early in the season each year there would never have been any fifty per cent. advance in the cost, and the probabilities are that the city of Philadelphia would be getting its streets cleaned and its ashes removed for half a million dollars or less instead of the nearly one million which its confederated contractors are extorting for this work at the present time.

Another important item of municipal expenditure is worth citing, as indicating the extent to which Philadelphia has been mulcted by its graft-politicians and favored contractors. By a system of carefully-juggled specifications, shrewdly designed to exclude competition, the Asphalt-Trust for years succeeded in securing enormous prices for the asphalt paving done at the city's expense. A comparative table covering the six years from 1899 to 1904 inclusive shows the price of asphalt paving per square yard to have been as follows: Trinidad Lake, 1899, $2.25; 1900, $2.25; 1901, $2.21; 1902, $2.57; 1903, $2.38; 1904, $2.00.

During these years of extortionate prices, John M. Mack was the controlling spirit of the Asphalt-Trust, as well as being concerned in a series of "midnight" surface-railway franchises, the Keystone Telephone Company, and a lot of rural real estate through which the city was expected to build a costly ten-mile boulevard. While promoter Mack and his fellow-grafters in these several profitable enterprises were able to agree among themselves, all other paving concerns were successfully excluded from participation in the paving contracts of Philadelphia. Mr. Mack's Asphalt-Trust set its own prices and did its work in its own way for a period of six years, the prices being much above those paid by other cities and the work and material being, to say the least, no better than they should have been.

The following passage from an editorial in the Philadelphia Times, July 24, 1902, throws additional light on this phase of "highway"-robbery: "How dishonest they (the Asphalt Brigands) are is further shown by the fact that the average price thus established, by the exclusion of competition, is nearly double the price bid by the same companies in cities where competition is admitted. The Mack Company, a few weeks ago, bid $1.23 on a paving contract at Wilkes-Barre, in actual competition, upon specifications not materially different from those upon which it conspires to charge Philadelphia $2.49. Another of the constituent companies of the Trust only last week bid for a paving contract in New York at $1.46 against a competing bid of $1.18.

"There is no competition in Philadelphia because it is deliberately excluded by the machine-control of the city government, and by this means the cost of paving is actually doubled. If the pending contracts be awarded to Mr. Mack's companies, the city will be robbed to the amount of nearly half a million of dollars."

The extent to which the city was being mulcted in these paving contracts was not definitely known until Mack and his fellow-grafters "got by the ears" over a proposed lease or sale of the Keystone Telephone Company. This proved a repetition of the oft-told story of the public getting its dues when rogues fall out. Mack's municipal foes undertook to freeze him out of any future participation in paving-contracts, and he retorted by a series of bids for contracts amounting to upwards of $1,000,000, and so far below those of any other competitors that the city administration was compelled to award him the entire series for the year 1905. Mack's bids for asphalt paving, in this instance, averaged $1.56 per square yard, and for paving $1.50 per square yard, which is a reduction of fifty cents from the lowest price paid during the previous six years, and of one dollar from the highest. Even at this lower bid there is said to be a margin of twenty-eight cents per square yard for profit to the contracting company. As Mack has fallen out with his fellow-grafters, he will not be expected to share his profits with them, and it is quite possible that the contracting company which he represents will really lose nothing by the change, while Philadelphia will gain not less than $400,000 upon this single series of contracts. Mack's enemies, having official supervision of the work, can be depended upon not to permit him to slight it.

It is impossible to follow the Ashbridge administration in all its ups and downs—from bad to worse, from reproach to disgrace; a few more prominent incidents will throw additional light upon its black history.

We have already spoken of the filtration job, which, when completed, will give our citizens, at an expense of probably thirty million dollars, an inadequate supply of "filtered filth," instead of the pure water we could have had for one-third the money, either from the upper Delaware or from Pike county.

The incident which gave the Ashbridge administration the widest notoriety was the attempted blackmail of John Wanamaker at the hands of A. L. English, the Director of "Public Safety." The gang was smarting under the merciless castigation it constantly received from the North American, a fearless and incorruptible paper owned by Mr. Thomas B. Wanamaker, the Ex-Postmaster-General's eldest son.

English called at Mr. Wanamaker's private office in May, 1900, and demanded that the North American's attacks upon the administration be stopped, and although Mr. Wanamaker informed him that the paper was owned and controlled by his son and that he had nothing whatever to do with its management, English insolently reiterated his demand and declared nobody would believe Wanamaker's statement, and that while he did not say that he was a liar, he wanted Mr. Wanamaker's answer, "Yes" or "No." The latter firmly declined to interfere with his son's paper, whereupon English threatened him with exposure of his personal record, adding that they had for eight months looked up his history and were fortified with affidavits against him.

Mr. Wanamaker, instead of ordering one of his porters to "expedite" the blackmailer down stairs, commanded him to leave the office, with the words: "Your language is offensive and insulting; I can hold no further conversation with you."

English slunk out of the great merchant's office with face blanched and eyes cast down; he had entered the arrogant braggart and departed a humiliated nobody. An amusing incident of English's retreat was his pitiable confusion when ordered to leave, which resulted in his forgetting to pick up his hat. This placed him in the embarrassing position of having to reenter Mr. Wanamaker's private office and again face the man who had routed him so quickly and ignominiously and ask for his head-gear. One outcome of this unwarranted attack upon a prominent citizen was a town-meeting at the Academy of Music, attended by a multitude of men and women who entered a loud protest against the blackmailing administration and demanded the dismissal of English. Ashbridge, of course, ignored this demand, for "birds of a feather," etc., etc.

Ashbridge had the distinction of having the Presbyterian Ministers' Association make the declaration that "every decent man should, in the name of every decent woman in Philadelphia, resent the speech made by him to the Junior Order of the American Mechanics." This speech made by the Mayor of the city was of a character lewd and offensive in the extreme.

A kaleidoscopic view of this remarkable administration exposes, besides the incidents already related, nearly everything else that is bad and vile, from the Keystone Telephone grab to the Electric-Light jobbery, from policy-playing to white slavery, from speak-easies to protected gambling-dens. Some of the ills which flourished under Ashbridge will be discussed and dissected later, under the title "Law and Order."

There was one event in these days, "dark and never to be forgotten," that demands a more detailed recital, as it fastens upon us, perhaps for all time, the claws and fangs of an all-powerful corporation, which by the help of Ashbridge robbed our people of the control of their streets.

Councils for the right to build trolley-tracks upon unoccupied streets, with an offer of three-cent fares and free transfers, the Organization and its beneficiaries at once saw an opportunity for a big steal. Bills were introduced in the Legislature, then in session, granting franchises to the public robbers; they were railroaded through with lightning-speed, signed by the Gang Governor at a midnight session, at which were present the great Pennsylvania patriots, Penrose, Quay, and Nichol and others.

Immediately afterwards thirteen franchises covering all unoccupied streets were introduced into Council and forced through in three days and sent to Ashbridge for approval. In the meanwhile, John Wanamaker offered the Mayor, in a written communication, $2,500,000 for the franchises, and as an earnest of the offer deposited $250,000 in a trust company. Ashbridge, in his anger at being interrupted in the game, literally threw the offer in the street and at midnight signed the ordinance robbing the city of two and a half million dollars, and making the grafters a free gift of many times that sum. How the spoils were divided has never been definitely ascertained; it is said, however, that one of the participants demanded and received as his share $400,000! (To be continued.)

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Ed. D. Heckerman Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Bedford people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. As a matter of fact," continued the druggist, "not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved, and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Mr. Heckerman and he will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest, The distress of urinary troubles, To find relief and cure? No reason why any reader Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Travers, City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

Cornerstone Laying
The cornerstone of the Bethel Church of God at Six Mile Run was laid September 30. The religious ceremonies were performed by Rev. J. M. Waggoner of Altoona. An address was delivered by Rev. R. Peters. A male quartette rendered several fine selections. The choir rendered good services, Miss Pearl Chamberlain presiding at the organ. In the evening her father led the choir and three of her brothers sang. Their music called forth much praise. In spite of the inclement weather a large crowd assembled and a good collection was received. Among those who witnessed the cornerstone laying was "Aunt Sallie" Figard, one of the prime movers in the building of the church just torn down. She is nearing four-score years.

Bossier Property Sold
The F. P. Bossier estate of Saxton, in bankruptcy, was sold at public sale on Tuesday by the trustee, S. B. Stoler. The planing mill and machinery, the double house on seven lots of ground, the foundation for a planing mill, the seven lots of ground and the personal property were purchased by G. H. Gibboney of Everett, for $3,103, and the opera house building on Railroad avenue was knocked down to E. Eichelberger for $4,320. Mr. Gibboney, it is said, will complete the new planing mill and operate it.—Saxton Herald.

LETTER TO ED. HECKERMAN
Bedford, Pa.
Dear Sir: Here's the difference between two pure paints; one strong; the other weak.
C. P. Hanger, Staunton, Va. painted two new houses, the houses exactly alike: one another pure paint, the other Devco. Devco cost a quarter less for paint and labor.
People generally are paying twice-over for paint.
